

Cleatham Hall's Traditional Afternoon Tea

Afternoon Tea is a quintessential English custom, introduced in the 1840's and was initially developed as a private social event to climb the ranks of society. Once referred to as tea receptions, certain events could see up to 200 guests invited to the home between 4-7pm. In the 21st century, afternoon tea has remained a royal tradition and is said to have been enjoyed by Queen Elizabeth II every day.

Thankfully, you don't need to be royalty to enjoy a delicious afternoon tea at Cleatham Hall!
